

Axis of Spin

architecture

AOS. architecture (Axis of Spin) was named in honour of the spinning stars in the universe, each one staying true to its own axis no matter where or how that star moves across the sky. This runs counter to the chaos of movement we experience on earth. However we each set our own axis, one that's central to our own movements, marking the home base that we can always return to. That centre, the core of our base, is grounded by a set of principles – integrity, excellence, innovation, partnership, and exploration.

The world is a reflection of the mind. Our work simply mirrors who we are, what we think, what choices we make and the values we live by. Architecture is not only the building itself. It is the building of relationships between man, nature and the environment, both physically and metaphysically.

THE SPACE OF THINKING, THE THINKING OF SPACE

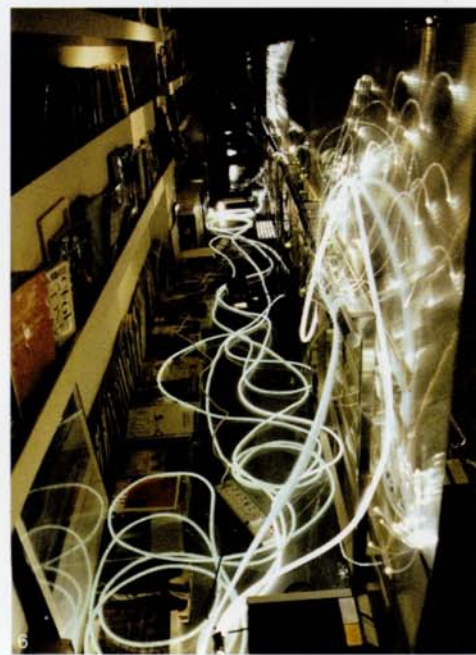

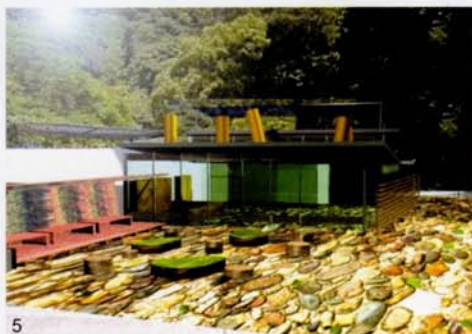

To us, each design opportunity is a thinking and re-thinking opportunity. Every project is an opportunity for exploration, discovery and contribution. Each brings together a group of people who are willing to work, think and create together. Many of our clients are integral partners along the path of design and decision making.

AOS views architecture as a tool of investigation, interrogation, questioning, creation and innovation. Each project commands a unique situation, since its parameters, site, conditions and people are never the same. Furthermore, architecture is a complicated process, because it is an amalgamation of many peoples' ideas, ambitions and aspirations. Every project we view unique, and aims to create the best benefits for client, the team and the project.

Quality in both Design and Management is demanded by our office. Each project is viewed as individual case and being served as unique situation. After detail analysis, Strategic Approach is being developed to achieve the best results for clients and users within the time and budget parameters.

As architects we have significant influence on our environment, AOS is committed to the integration of Environmental Concern in our projects.
